Municipal Reform Updates

After a naming workshop and historical research, the Elected Officials Advisory Committee has come up with two potential names for Entity 40 for feedback from the public: Tantramar Township and Beauséjour Township.

The Committee has also determined that the new entity will be a town based on the provincial legal requirements. However, the Committee felt the term township provided a more inclusive, community feel. Although the community cannot legally be a township, it is something that can be included in any literature, letter head, etc.

The Committee has also been in discussions regarding consultation with First Nations. This process can be very complicated as it will likely have to involve a provincial consultation process and not just one with Fort Folly. The option does exist, similar to what Grand Bay-Westfield is doing, where the new community could have a First Nations ceremonial name which the new council could begin the consultation on with provincial First Nations in the new year.

A full description of the history to both the Tantramar and Beauséjour Township names can be found on the Town of Sackville's website. Residents can provide feedback on the proposed names via entity40nb@gmail.com.

To keep up to date on any future developments concerning municipal reform here in Sackville, please visit the Town of Sackville's website.

Stay Fire Safe This Spring

With warmer weather right around the corner, we would like to remind residents that under the Fire Prevention By-Law No.275, Section 3, rubbish fires are strictly prohibited within town limits. If you would like to have an outside fire, you must use an outdoor wood burning appliance, which is a manufactured non-combustible enclosed container, designed to hold a small fire, for decorative purposes only. The size of this wood burning appliance should not be larger than 1 meter in any direction and may include a chimney. This appliance cannot be used when the New Brunswick Department of Natural Resources and Energy have placed a ban on open burning in the region.

Finally, please remember to change the batteries in your smoke alarms. By doing so, you can be confident that you have working smoke alarms in your home. Please remember, “Working Smoke Alarms Save Lives”, so be sure to test your life saving devices monthly.

Please note that masks are not required but they are encouraged.

For more information on the course, or to register, please phone 364-4938 or email visitor@sackville.com. Registration can be done at the front desk at Town Hall 31 Main St., or here.

Sackville Arts Wall Induction Ceremony

After an eight month wait, the Sackville Arts Wall Committee is excited to finally announce the 2021, now 2022, Sackville Arts Wall Inductees: Janet Hammock (Builder) and Del Wheaton (Musician). A ceremony will take place on the evening of May 25, 2022 at the Vogue Cinema from 6:00-8:00 pm.

Originally from Vancouver, Janet Hammock came to Sackville in 1975 with a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from Yale. For the next 26 years she taught in the Department of Music at Mount Allison University. A talented pianist, she has won acclaim for her concerts and recitals across Canada, and has brought many other renowned classical and experimental musicians to perform locally. Determined from the outset that music should be a community-wide experience, Janet has conducted public workshops in deep listening, taught numerous courses for the Tantramar Seniors College, and from 2010 to 2016 published a column entitled Sackville Soundscapes in the weekly Tribune-Post newspaper. Since 2015 she has hosted Fly Me to the Moon, a bi-weekly radio program showcasing local musicians of all kinds.

In the words of one former student, Janet is “dedicated to expanding the musical horizons of those around her.” With zest, compassion, and generosity, she has helped nurture an appreciation for arts and creativity throughout the community.

Born in Midgic, N.B. on July 23, 1933, Delanor (Del) Wheaton started playing guitar when he was 15 years old and has been sharing his love of music with others ever since. A multi-talented performer, he soon mastered harmonica, bass, mandolin, fiddle, and clarinet as well, becoming a valued member of a succession of local country bands such as the Midgic Pioneers, the Golden Valley Boys, the Marshwinds, Rustic Harmony, and Diamonds in the Rough. For many years he toured Canada and the eastern United States, playing and recording with Ivan Hicks and Maritime Express. In addition, he was a founding member of the Sackville Citizens’ Band and performed with the band of the 8th Canadian Hussars for more than 30 years.

Del’s lifelong dedication to music and to community has been acknowledged by many awards, and in 2005 he was inducted as a member of the New Brunswick Country Music Hall of Fame.

Japanese Knotweed: What you Need to Know

Japanese knotweed is an invasive perennial plant brought to North America in the late 1800s for ornamental purposes and to reduce erosion and feed livestock. Unfortunately, things have not turned out as planned and the plant has become a real nuisance for many. Now that we are heading into May, you'll see the plant beginning to sprout from the ground. These sprouts will quickly grow up to three metres high. With roots growing over seven feet deep that spread up to 10 meters to either side, knotweed can damage concrete foundations, wells and more. It quickly entrenches itself and cannot be removed easily.

Spring aproats

There are batches of knotweed located throughout the Town of Sackville, both on private and public land. We caution you though, do not attempt to move a mature plant. Doing so could very easily result in spreading the plant more widely. You can control knotweed from spreading by mowing or pulling out the sprouts. You'll need to do so consistently, and any sprouts should be bagged and left for municipal pickup with your green compost.

Full growth

Another method is tarping, which involves destroying the root system by covering a population of the plant with dark material to prevent sunlight from getting through. Killing the root system can take 5-10 years, however, and if it is not fully killed when the tarps are removed, you will be starting from square one. You can also try injecting the sprouts with salt water to weaken the system.

If you come across a patch of Japonese Knotweed, or any other invasive species, please report on the iNaturalist app. By helping track the spread it will help us in determining the best way to control the plant.

All You Need to Know About Ticks

Spring is here, which makes is officially tick season in Sackville. Ticks are nasty little creatures and can cause lyme disease in both your pets and their owners. Although tick prevention medications are available for pets at any veterinarian office, preventing tick bites in people is not so simple. It is no secret that the benefits of getting outside far outweigh the risks of locking yourself in your house, but if ticks are a worry for you, here are some tips on how you can prevent them from getting on your or your kids.

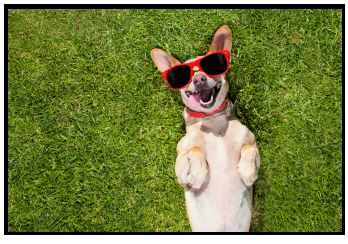

- Keep your lawn short and include acidic mulches in your gardens to keep ticks away from your yard.
- Try bug spray. Some sprays can be good for ticks, just read the label and follow the instructions.
- Wearing rubber boots when in longer grass will help keep ticks off your legs.
- Wear longer clothing if you'll be in the woods or long grass. Some clothes even have a tick repellant called permethrin. Take a look to see what's out there.
- Be sure to do a quick tick check each day. Make it a habit. Ticks can be tiny, so be sure to look closely. And look everywhere on your body. Not just the obvious places.

Despite taking all of the precautions above, a tick could still find you. If this happens, you'll need to remove it. Tweezers will do the trick, just be sure to work slowly and methodically to remove the full tick. You do not want its head stuck in your skin. Additionally, do not try burning or suffocating the tick. Killing the tick while it's lodged in your skin can result in a final release of fluid into your skin, which is where you'll find lime disease.

Speaking of lyme disease, not all ticks in the area carry it. There are two main types of ticks in Sackville, the dog or wood tick, and the black-legged or deer tick. It's the second one you need to look out for. Of course, not all deer ticks will carry lyme disease. If you find one you're concerned with, save it and call your vet for information on how you could have it tested. You can also check out etick.ca to help identify the type of tick you are dealing with.

Urban/Rural Rides Looks for Volunteers

The last couple of years have presented many challenges for non-profits. As a transportation service, Urban/Rural Rides (URR) has worked hard to observe safety protocols in an effort to keep people safe from COVID. They were often at the mercy of the current levels of lockdown, frequently having to cancel dozens of rides in a span of a week or two when in high lock down and hospitals and doctors cancelled appointments or switched to virtual. Canceled appointments, then needed to be rescheduled.

A second challenge was a decreased pool of volunteer drivers due to the pandemic. URR, however, was very fortunate to avoid any COVID cases the entire time the province was under the emergency order.

Sadly, like many of our health care facilities, we are now struggling to keep up with demand. URR operates on the side of caution when there is contact because many of the clients are struggling with health issues. On the other side of things, everything is now open. People want to resume normal life and therefor the demand for rides is increasing. Unfortunately, that puts URR in a position of turning down rides and sometimes, if a driver needs to isolate and a replacement cannot be found for the rides they were booked to do, rides may need to be canceled or rescheduled.

All of this to say, more volunteer drivers are needed to keep things running smoothly and to make sure those who need to get to medical appointments or access life needs like food, can do so in a timely manner. You are invited to be part of the Urban/Rural Rides team of amazing volunteers who change lives one ride at a time. Volunteer drivers are reimbursed $0.46/km.

To volunteer, please call 962-3073 or email urbanruralrides@gmail.com. More information can be found on their website.

Just going 'gluten free'? Why you should stop

Over the past decade increasing numbers of Canadians are shopping for or requesting gluten-free food at their local restaurants. The global market for gluten-free products is estimated at $17.59 billion USD and growing. There are more gluten-free options now and they taste better than ever. The gluten-free diet (GFD) has become popular, especially with celebrities, and is sometimes even combined with other diets such as keto and flexitarian as a lifestyle - a way to eat healthier. "I'm trying to cut down my carbs," is often what you'll hear people say.

Perhaps you have experienced gas, bloating or some other digestive issue after eating some pasta or bread. You decided to give the GFD a try and you feel a bit better. You eliminated breads, pastas, crackers, and cereals. That should be it, right? Maybe not.

What if we told you that you could have an underlying lifelong autoimmune disease? Could it be celiac? Celiac disease is a genetic autoimmune condition where your body sees gluten as an invader and your body's immune system fights back to destroy the gluten protein which is found in ingredients with wheat, barley or rye. Overtime, this immune reaction damages the villi, small finger-like projections that line your small intestine and promote nutrient absorption. When the villi get damaged, nutrients cannot be properly absorbed into your body. This can lead to a wide variety of complications and symptoms.

One percent (1%) of the world has the disease yet only 15% of those have been diagnosed. The reason so many people go undiagnosed is because of the popularity of the GFD. Millions of people simply go gluten free. But if you have celiac disease, there is no cheating, no morsel, no "just one slice of pizza." You also might be surprised that gluten is in a lot of products. It's in sauces, dressings, candy, seasonings, and much more. When you go to a restaurant, gluten-friendly doesn't cut it. For a person with celiac disease, the gluten-free diet is strict, lifelong, challenging to follow and expensive.

To confirm a diagnosis of celiac disease you need to be eating gluten. If you stop eating gluten, your gut starts to heal. Wouldn't you like to know if you really need to avoid gluten for the rest of your life?

Gone gluten free already? Visit the Canadian Celiac Association and learn how to prepare for the tests. Hint: you will need to eat gluten again for the testing. There is some good news. If you do have celiac disease and caught it relatively early, your long-term prognosis to live a healthier life is good! If you don't have celiac disease, you may still have a gluten intolerance or a related condition that should be thoroughly investigated.

If you are all clear and you can still eat gluten, lucky you! Ingredients like wheat, rye and barley have important nutrients such as magnesium, B6, iron, potassium and fibre which are necessary for maintaining good health. The GFD is expensive, and many packaged gluten-free products are highly refined, contain additional sugar and other additives to make them taste good which are not ideal for your nutritional health.

May is Celiac Disease Awareness Month and we encourage you to understand your risk for a lifelong autoimmune disease. Visit the www.celiac.ca and take our Symptom Check Quiz and learn about your risk factors for the disease.

So, if you are just going gluten free – think twice and stop. Learn if you have a serious lifelong condition and get onto a path of better health.
